

ADMINISTRATIVE - INTERNAL USE ONLY

PRES VISITS
15 Feb 79

NFAC #5525/78

12 December 1978

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence
THROUGH : Director, National Foreign Assessment Center
Deputy Director of Central Intelligence
FROM : Associate Coordinator for Academic Relations and External Analytical Support, NFAC
SUBJECT : Meeting with University Presidents

1. Action Requested: Signature on the attached letters to ten university presidents inviting them to the Agency for a day of discussions and briefings on 15 February 1979.

2. Background: The letters are similar to those you have sent to the university presidents invited to the previous three meetings of this kind. The following are addressed:

[REDACTED]
STATINTL
William Gordon Bowen
Angelo Bartlett Giannatti [REDACTED]
Marvin L. Goldberger [REDACTED]
Hanna Holborn Gray
William Walsh Hagerty
Robert William MacVicar
Frank Newman
Rev. John Patrick Raynor, S.J.
Joab Langston Thomas
Clifton Reginald Wharton, Jr.

Princeton University
Yale University
California Institute of Technology
University of Chicago
Drexel University
Oregon State University
University of Rhode Island
Marquette University
North Carolina State University
State University of New York

(See Attachment A for bio sketches)

3. This new list of nominees for invitations was drawn up with the assistance of [REDACTED] an invitation from you for a visit to CIA. The invitations will be delivered by [REDACTED] representatives where possible.

STATINTL

ADMINISTRATIVE - INTERNAL USE ONLY

NFAC #5525/78

SUBJECT: Meeting with University Presidents

4. Nine university presidents and one distinguished educator, who were unable to accept your previous invitations, have already agreed to attend the 15 February 1979 gathering. They are:

Thomas A. Bartlett	Association of American Universities
-James Edward Cheek	Howard University
Richard Michael Cyert	Carnegie-Mellon University
Frederick Davison	University of Georgia
Robert Crocker Good	Denison University
-William R. Harvey	Hampton Institute
Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh	University of Notre Dame
Philip G. Hoffman	University of Houston
George Michael Low	Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute
Jean Mayer	Tufts University

(See Attachment B for bio sketches)

5. We are shooting for around twelve university presidents attending the February visit. The schedule and sequence of meetings for this visit should be substantially the same as the successful meeting of 26 October 1978.

6. Actions Recommended:

- a. That you sign the letters to the ten university presidents.
- b. That you indicate your concurrence with the arrangements proposed for handling the fourth university presidents visit.

STATINTL

Attachments:
A and B

ADMINISTRATIVE - INTERNAL USE ONLY

NFAC #5525/78

SUBJECT: Meeting with University Presidents

APPROVED:

Director of Central Intelligence

DISAPPROVED:

Director of Central Intelligence

DATE: _____

ADMINISTRATIVE - INTERNAL USE ONLY

NFAC #5525/78

SUBJECT: Meeting with University Presidents

Distribution: (all with attachments)

Original - DCI

1 - DDCI

1 - ER

1 - D/NFAC

1 - A/DCI/PA

3 - NFAC/CAR

1 - NFAC Registry

NFAC/ACAR/[REDACTED]/js (8 December 1978)

STATINTL

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear President Bowen:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provisions of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several other university presidents and leaders of the American academic community on 15 February 1979 for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of ten or perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I would be most grateful if you could take the time to do this. I have asked [REDACTED] of my Academic Relations Staff to be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. William G. Bowen, President
Princeton University
Princeton, New Jersey 08540

Letters to: Dr. William G. Bowen
Dr. Angelo B. Giamatti
Dr. Marvin L. Goldberger
Dr. Hanna H. Gray
Dr. William W. Hagerty
Dr. Robert W. MacVicar
Dr. Frank Newman
Rev. John P. Raynor, S.J.
Dr. Joab L. Thomas
Dr. Clifton R. Wharton, Jr.

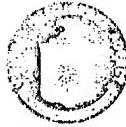

Princeton University
Yale University
California Institute of Technology
University of Chicago
Drexel University
Oregon State University
University of Rhode Island
Marquette University
North Carolina State University
State University of New York

Distribution:

Orig - Addressee
1 - DCI
1 - DDCI
1 - ER
1 - D/NFAC
1 - A/DCI/PA
3 - NFAC/CAR
1 - NFAC Registry

NFAC/ACAR/ [REDACTED] /js (8 December 1978)

STATINTL

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear President Giamatti:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provisions of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several other university presidents and leaders of the American academic community on 15 February 1979 for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of ten or perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

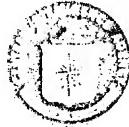

STATINTL

I would be most grateful if you could take the time to do this. I have asked [REDACTED] of my Academic Relations Staff to be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. Angelo B. Giamatti, President
Yale University
New Haven, Connecticut 06520

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear President Goldberger:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provisions of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several other university presidents and leaders of the American academic community on 15 February 1979 for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of ten or perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I would be most grateful if you could take the time to do this. I have asked [redacted] of my Academic Relations Staff to be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. Marvin L. Goldberger, President
California Institute of Technology
1201 East California Boulevard
Pasadena, California 91125

Central Intelligence Agency

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear President Gray:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provisions of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several other university presidents and leaders of the American academic community on 15 February 1979 for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of ten or perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I would be most grateful if you could take the time to do this. I have asked [redacted] of my Academic Relations Staff to be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. Hanna H. Gray, President
University of Chicago
Chicago, Illinois 60637

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear President Hagerty:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provisions of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several other university presidents and leaders of the American academic community on 15 February 1979 for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of ten or perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

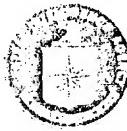

STATINTL

I would be most grateful if you could take the time to do this. I have asked [REDACTED] of my Academic Relations Staff to be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. William W. Hagerty, President
Drexel University
32nd and Chestnut Streets
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19104

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear President MacVicar:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provisions of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several other university presidents and leaders of the American academic community on 15 February 1979 for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of ten or perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I would be most grateful if you could take the time to do this. I have asked [REDACTED] of my Academic Relations Staff to be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. Robert W. MacVicar, President
Oregon State University
Corvallis, Oregon 97331

Central Intelligence Agency

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear President Newman:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provisions of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several other university presidents and leaders of the American academic community on 15 February 1979 for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of ten or perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I would be most grateful if you could take the time to do this, I have asked ██████████ of my Academic Relations Staff to be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept,

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. Frank Newman, President
University of Rhode Island
Kingston, Rhode Island 02881

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear President Raynor:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provisions of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several other university presidents and leaders of the American academic community on 15 February 1979 for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of ten or perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I would be most grateful if you could take the time to do this. I have asked [REDACTED] of my Academic Relations Staff to be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Rev. John P. Raynor, S.J.
President
Marquette University
1217 West Wisconsin Avenue
Milwaukee, Wisconsin 53233

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear Chancellor Thomas:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provisions of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several university presidents and leaders of the American academic community on 15 February 1979 for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of ten or perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I would be most grateful if you could take the time to do this. I have asked [REDACTED] of my Academic Relations Staff to be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. Joab L. Thomas, Chancellor
North Carolina State University
Raleigh, North Carolina 27607

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear Chancellor Wharton:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provisions of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several university presidents and leaders of the American academic community on 15 February 1979 for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of ten or perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I would be most grateful if you could take the time to do this. I have asked ██████████ of my Academic Relations Staff to be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. Clifton R. Wharton, Jr.
Chancellor
State University of New York
1400 Washington Avenue
Albany, New York 12222